

Corrigendum to
“The nexus of oil, conflict, and climate change vulnerability of pastoral communities in northwest Kenya” published in Earth Syst. Dynam., 6, 703–717, 2015

J. Schilling^{1,2}, R. Locham³, T. Weinzierl¹, J. Vivekananda², and J. Scheffran¹

¹University of Hamburg, Institute of Geography, CLISEC, Hamburg, Germany

²International Alert, London, UK

³Danish Demining Group, Lodwar, Kenya

Correspondence to: J. Schilling (janpeter.schilling@uni-hamburg.de)

Published: 6 November 2015

In Sect. 2.1, “Research area” (p. 704), long and short rains have been mixed up. It should say the following: “The climate in Turkana is semi-arid to arid and characterized by a bimodal rainfall pattern with “short rains” between October and December and “long rains” between March and May.”